

Sharing by playing

How can we show that Europe has a common history, a culture which goes beyond political borders and has always been nurtured by « elsewhere » by interactions ?

Playing rules :

This is a team game. Form equitable groups according to the total number of participants. We recommend forming teams with different nationalities : your respective knowledges will help you find further correct answers. NB : the game will be easier to play if there are more than two teams.

The goal is to reach the last square. The first team to reach it wins 10 points and stops the game.

One person shall be the story-teller during the game. Only he has the booklet, which gathers the questions and the answers to each square. The narrator will be asking the questions, stating the penalty and arbitrating the game.

Find the full playing rules in the game booklet.

This game is about European heritage, find answer in Europe!
